Reasons to consolidate your pensions

If you've worked for more than one employer, you will doubtless have more than one pension plan. How long is it since you last looked at them? Are they languishing in poor performing funds?

Combining some or all of your pensions into a single plan could save you money, achieve better growth and make your life easier. Here are some things to consider:

5 benefits of pension consolidation

1. Consolidating could save you money. Each pension plan has its own annual charges so combining multiple pensions into one means you'll only pay one annual fee. Shopping around could also help you find a plan with lower charges than your current ones.
2. It gives you greater flexibility. Modern pensions may offer benefits that older ones don't, like flexible drawdown of your pot or income for your loved ones after you pass away.
3. It keeps things simple. You only have to remember one set of login credentials and, if your address changes or you want to change the recipient of any death benefits, you only have to tell one provider.
4. You could get better opportunities. Bringing your pensions together could increase the overall value of your savings and a different plan or provider might give you access to a wider range of investment funds.
5. It makes it easier to plan for the future. An important part of retirement planning is understanding what you've got and what you'll need. Having everything in one place makes it easier to track your plan's value against your goals.

Things to be aware of

You could be charged exit fees. Some plans still have exit penalties so make sure you're aware of these and the impact they might have on your pot.

It may be better to stay in a final salary (also known as defined benefit) scheme. These offer a guaranteed income in retirement alongside other benefits (like a pension for your spouse when you die) which you'll lose if you transfer out.

There's no guarantee you'll be better off consolidating. Your current pensions may have benefits like early access or guaranteed annuity rates that might be worth keeping, and annual fees on other pensions may not be competitive.

Home insurance explained

This year sees new rules from insurers that could bring you savings on your home insurance renewal.

The Financial Conduct Authority (FCA) has announced that insurers will have to offer the same deals to new customers and renewing customers for their home insurance.

Home insurance customers are particularly affected by hikes in renewals, so this is a good time to review your policy with your financial adviser.

What is buildings insurance?

Buildings insurance covers the building itself and its structure – like the roof, floors, windows and in some cases external walls and garages. It will also cover permanent fittings in your kitchen and bathroom (but not your boiler – you'll need specific boiler protection for that).

Mortgage lenders require homeowners to have buildings insurance in place. It's there to protect your property's structure from damaging events like fires, storms, earthquakes, flooding and natural disasters, as well as things like subsidence and even malicious damage or vandalism.

What does buildings insurance not cover?

Buildings insurance won't cover:

- Accidents or normal wear and tear in the home
- Issues arising from neglect of the property
- Damage to gates, fencing or plants
- Effects of frost to external pipes and brickwork
- Damage from pests, insects or birds

To cover some of these issues, your insurance provider may offer accidental coverage as an extra to your policy – but you'll pay more for it. Your adviser can help you decide whether the cost of accidental damage cover is worth it in terms of what the policy actually includes.

It's worth noting that buildings insurance coverage is invalidated if the property is left unattended for more than 30 consecutive days.

What does contents insurance cover?

In a home insurance policy, the contents coverage allows you to select a sum of money (for example £10,000) that you estimate will cover the replacement of contents inside your home if they are damaged, destroyed or stolen.

These items could include electronics and entertainment consoles, kitchenware, furniture, antiques, gym equipment and jewellery. If you have a particularly expensive single item (like a piece of jewellery, a watch or a painting) you may have to declare it separately, depending on your provider's conditions of coverage. This could increase your insurance premium, however. We can help you assess your contents and what your level of coverage should be.

Do you need contents coverage?

Although contents coverage is not compulsory when you own a property, most owners take out some cover (and most providers offer a discounted premium if you have buildings and contents insurance together). Having both means if you need to make a claim for something that affected the building but also some of your contents (for example, flooding damage to your home's foundation and soft furnishings) you would be able to claim for both – using the same policy.

Even if you are renting a property, some contents cover is a good idea to insure your valuable items and provide peace of mind should anything happen.

How we can help you save

Your adviser can search the market and find a home insurance policy that covers your property's structure sufficiently, along with giving you the best advice on how much contents cover you really need. We're here to make sure you're not overpaying for a renewal and will examine your existing plan's small print to check that it properly covers at-risk areas of your home and meets your needs.

Your adviser can help review your home insurance – especially when it's time to renewal – and help ensure you're not overpaying for your policy.

Is it better to gift a property or leave it in your will?

Before passing away, Maggie gifted her house worth more than £700,000 to her son Bruce but still remained living there, paying a token amount of rent. Nine years later, following Maggie's death, Bruce was surprised to be landed with an inheritance tax bill for the property.

What did Maggie do wrong?

Maggie knew if she died within seven years of gifting Bruce her house that he may well end up paying inheritance tax on it. She also knew enough to pay Bruce rent after gifting him the property. However, the amount she paid was well below the market rate and this is where she fell foul of inheritance tax laws. By only paying a token amount of rent, the house remained part of Maggie's estate and Bruce was hit with a hefty inheritance tax bill.

How to decide whether to gift a property or leave it in your will?

There are no easy answers to this. There are a lot of complicated tax rules to consider and the best approach will depend on your individual circumstances. Whatever the situation, it's an important decision and one best made as a family. We've looked at the pros and cons of both to give you an idea of the kind of things you'll need to consider.

Leaving a property in your will

The first thing to do is find out the residence nil rate band (RNRB) allowance for the property in question. If, like Maggie, you're leaving your main home to a child or grandchild, they'll benefit from an extra £175,000 tax-free allowance on top of the standard £325,000. This means you could leave an estate worth up to £500,000 and there'll be no inheritance tax to pay. And if you and your spouse are leaving a joint estate, that doubles to £1m.

Maggie's husband Bill died in 2019 and the executors of the estate can also claim Bill's residence Nil Rate Band. This means that the £675,000 can be claimed as an amount where no inheritance tax is applied, meaning this £675,000 remains inheritance tax free.

The benefits of leaving a property in your will are that you'll retain control of it, it isn't generally at risk from anyone else's divorce, death, or bankruptcy and, currently, there's no capital gains tax to pay for the beneficiary.

Working with a professional financial planner, it would have been possible for Bill to leave 'assets to the value of the Nil Rate Band' and have what is called a 'Will Trust' written into the will. As this is a specialist area, it is important to discuss with a professional and consider the options.

Gifting a property

If, as in Maggie's case, the property is worth more than the RNRB, you may want to consider passing full ownership to a child. You then need to move out or, as Bruce found out to his cost, pay rent at the going market rate.

There are many reasons people choose to gift a property: to minimise inheritance tax; to provide financial help to loved ones sooner rather than later; or to avoid care home fees. If you're considering it for the latter reason, you should be aware that anti-avoidance rules are designed to stop people doing this.

If you gift a property, you'll lose control of it. But once the transfer of ownership takes place, so begins the seven year countdown for removing the property from inheritance tax liability.

Right sizing

Another option for improving your quality of life into old age and helping the kids out at the same time is right sizing. In other words, selling the family home and buying somewhere that is easier to manage and better suits your needs as you get older. This option generally releases equity, which can be used to give loved ones a financial boost while you're still alive. Alternatively, you could investigate a lifetime mortgage as an option for releasing money to gift away now.

Insuring against inheritance tax

Another possibility Maggie could have considered is taking out whole of life insurance. This would have provided a tax-free lump sum on death to cover Bruce's inheritance tax bill. Writing the policy into trust would have ensured any payout wasn't included as part of Maggie's estate.

However, policies can be expensive and HMRC would have treated the premiums as a lifetime gift if Maggie paid them herself. Bearing this in mind and considering Bruce would have been the person to benefit from the insurance cover, it would have made sense for him to pay the premiums if he was keen to go down this road.

Key takeaways:

- When deciding whether to gift a property or leave it in your will, you need to focus on what you're trying to achieve.
- The benefits of leaving a property in your will are that you'll retain control for the rest of your life, it isn't generally at risk from anyone else's divorce, death or bankruptcy and, currently, there's no capital gains tax to pay for the person who inherits it.
- Gifting a property can be used to minimise inheritance tax and allow you to provide financial support to loved ones before your death.
- Right sizing may improve your quality of life and release equity.
- It's possible to insure against inheritance tax but it can be expensive so it may be more appropriate for beneficiaries to pay the premiums.
- Professional advice can help you and your loved ones understand the various implications of the different options and allow you to make informed decisions.

The importance of professional advice

As you can see, estate planning is far from straightforward so it makes sense to work with a financial adviser who can look into different scenarios and help you and your loved ones make informed decisions.
